BASE BALL NOTES.

Gossip of the Diamond—Doings of Professionals and Amateurs.

George Reiman is pitching fine ball for the Dayton (Ohio) club.

The Millersburg ball team will play at Cynthiana Monday. Grimes and Howard will be the battery for Millersburg, and Petersen and Curle for Cynthiana.

LANDLORD JAS. HUFF, of the Commercial Hotel, at Cynthiana, passed through Paris yesterday for Lexington, to help present Cynthiana's claims for the annual meet of the National Fox Hunters Association. The royal manner in which Cynthiana cared for the big bicycle meet entitles her claims and her invitation to careful consideration. The fox hunters are guaranteed the freedom of over 3,000 acres, besides a fine time. Here's hoping the Maiden City will get the meet.

THE Kentucky newspapers are this week teeming with nice things about the K. P. A.'s pleasing meeting at Middlesboro, and delightful excursions to Chattanooga, Knoxville and Nashville, and the many courtesies extended to the boys. They cannot say too many nice things of those who entertained them or of the L. & N., which always treats the K. P. A. so handsomely and generously.

STEAMER ADEN

Wrecked on a Reef Near Socotra During a Gale.

A Boat Full of Sailors and Passengers Got Away From the Sinking Ship—The Vessel Has Not Been Heard From, and it is Feared All Are Dead.

LONDON, June 30.—The missing steamer Aden has at last been heard from. She was wrecked June 9 on a reef near Socotra during a terrific gale. A number of her officers and crew were swept overboard and drowned. Eight passengers were also drowned. A boat full of sailors and passengers got away from the ship successfully on the morning of June 10 as the vessel was going to pieces. The gale, however, was unabated and the seas were still running mountain high. The boat has not been heard from, and it is feared all who sought safety in her perished.

Socotra is an island in the Indian ocean, off the east coast of Africa.

A later dispatch says nine passengers, three European and 33 native sailors of the crew were saved, while 25 passengers, 20 European and 33 native members of the crew, and all the ship's officers are missing, and are supposed to be drowned.

The Aden sailed from Yokohama April 28, and touched at Colombo, island of Ceylon, June 1.

BUSINESS BLOCK,

In South Scranton, Pa., Blown Up With Dynamite—Three Persons Seriously Injured.

SCRANTON, Pa., June 30.—A dynamite explosion early Tuesday morning in South Scranton blew up the business block of Leon Olchofski, a double dwelling block owned by him and a detached house owned by Michael O'Hara. The business block, a two-story building, was torn to pieces. Twenty other houses had all the windows blown out and plaster torn from the walls. The shock was felt all over the city.

The cause of the explosion is unknown, but Olchofski alleges that it was the work of enemies he made during political and church disputes in that section, he being one of the principals in troubles which led to a split in the Polish Catholic congregation. Olchofski was seriously injured in saving his wife, and his recovery is doubtful. Following the explosion the wrecked buildings took fire, but the firemen kept the flames from spreading. The other properties seriously damaged were the brick business block and dwelling of Charles Johnson, dwellings of William Grable, Charles Kiefer, John Kline, Michael Joyce, Dr. J. J. Walsh, James Welsh, Adam Ellinger, Bridget Lavelle, Joseph Denims, Philip Klein, Carl Scheuerman and George Gardner, and B. Huses' blacksmith shop. In some of the houses the sleeping people were covered with falling plaster. The infant child of Michael Joyce was dangerously injured and a little son of John Klein almost suffocated. The total loss will reach $25,000. The ruins are being cleared to ascertain if there are any victims buried in them.

COLONIZATION SCHEME

Of Mr. Debs Has Not Been Abandoned as Has Been Reported.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 30.—The Debs colonization scheme has not been abandoned as has been reported. Victor L. Berger, editor of the Vorwärts of this city, who attended the conference of the leaders of the social democracy at Chicago recently, says the whole matter has been misunderstood. He says it is the intention of the social democracy all over the country to go on organizing in the hope that eventually they will get into power and revolutionize the social system of the United States. Meanwhile, as fast as they get means, they intend to send unemployed people from the cities to a point in the west still to be selected, where they may have a chance to make a livelihood. The colonization scheme is only a side issue with the social democracy, but Mr. Berger says the press of the country have made it the main plan. Mr. Debs is in full accord with the plan outlined by Mr. Berger. The latter says there are three million unemployed in the country and he will consider his party lucky if it can raise money enough to transport only 10,000 to the west. There was never any intention of forming a vast army to invade the west in search of homes and a livelihood.

Sullivan Falls Out With His Trainer.

NEW YORK, June 30.—John L. Sullivan, who has been in training at Wm. Muldoon's, at White Plains, for the past week or two, in anticipation of a meeting with Fitzsimmons, has had a falling out with the veteran trainer, and as a consequence, he left his training quarters Tuesday night and came to New York city. He stated that he would go either to College Point or Oceanica, N. J., and there resume his training. He says that he has not yet selected a new trainer.

Death of "Old Hoss" Hoey.

NEW YORK, June 30.—William P. Hoey, "Old Hoss," prominent comedian, died Tuesday at the home of his mother-in-law in this city. Mr. Hoey was known throughout the United States through the character he had created in the farce, "A Parlor Match." Previous to his business and professional connection with Charles Evans, Hoey and Bryant constituted a musical comedy pair at vaudeville shows.

Anthrax Among Cattle.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., June 30.—A disease which resembles and is pronounced by local veterinarians to be anthrax has broken out among the cattle on the farm of George Mahan, near Sugar Grove, Pa., near this city. Five valuable cows and a bull have died from the disease within the past 48 hours.

A Wreck on the Oregon Short Line.

SALT LAKE, Utah, June 30.—A report has reached here that a passenger train on the Oregon Short Line road was wrecked near Glens Ferry, Idaho, and several people injured.

IDENTIFIED.

A Prospect That the East River Mystery May Be Solved—The Ripper's Victim Believed to Be Wm. Guidensuppe, of New York.

NEW YORK, July 1.—An identification that seems to promise a clearing up of the Ripper mystery is that the murdered man, two parts of whose body were found, was William Guidensuppe, an attendant at the Murray Hill baths, on Forty-second street. Several persons have so far identified the remains as his. A woman, who once loved this man, hated him. Two men were jealous of him, and had threatened him with revenge.

The positive identification is made by the superintendent of the baths and five attendants who had seen the man naked day after day for years, and knew every mark on him. He was further identified by Dr. J. S. Cosby. Dr. Cosby had lanced and treated a felon on the index finger of Guidensuppe's left hand. At the morgue Dr. Cosby instantly identified the cicatrix of the wound his lance had made. Guidensuppe had been a sailor.

On his breast was tattooed in India ink the bust figure of a woman. It covered a space as large as a man's hand.

The butcher who cut him up cut this out. Guidensuppe left the baths last Friday morning and disappeared. In all the four years of his employment there he had never missed a day's work. No word has been received from him. Guidensuppe had been living with Mrs. Augusta Nack, a midwife. She says she has not seen him since Friday morning and does not care.

She found in his possession the card of another woman. It is said they quarreled.

There are two other men in the case whose jealousy of Guidensuppe was common gossip among the Murray-Hill bath attendants. These men the police are looking for. Mrs. Nack is under surveillance. She had begun to dismantle her flat, telling other tenants she was going to Europe. The police Wednesday morning think they have Chapter One of the mystery. There are many more chapters.

The police late Wednesday afternoon released Herman Nack, saying that there was no evidence connecting him with the murder of Guidensuppe.

LINCOLN'S MOTHER.

A Movement to Provide a Fund for the Care of Her Grave.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 1.—Leading representatives of the Loyal Legion, Grand Army of the Republic, Woman's Relief Corps and other organizations, met in the executive chamber of the state house Wednesday for the purpose of considering plans for the erection of a monument over the grave of Nancy Hanks Lincoln, mother of Abraham Lincoln and who is buried in Spencer county, this state, and also to provide a fund for keeping the proposed memorial and lot in repair. A national appeal for public subscriptions will be made by an executive committee appointed for that purpose.

To Cast a Big Steel Gun.

CLEVELAND, O., July 1.—Preparations are being made by the Otis Steel Co. to cast a big steel gun. Dr. R. J. Gatling, the inventor of the Gatling gun, is of the opinion that it is possible to make modern heavy ordnance of cast steel. In 1896, after years of effort, he obtained an appropriation of $40,000 from congress with which to make a test. The gun will be eight inches bore, 23 feet long and will weigh about 25 tons. The casting will be done by the Otis Co., and the gun will be bored by the Cleveland City Forge Co.

To Transfer National Headquarters.

CLEVELAND, O., July 1.—The headquarters of the national republican committee are to be located in Cleveland. They will be transferred from Washington to the famous Perry-Payne building in Cleveland, where Hanna conducted the national republican campaign. The Washington headquarters will be kept open, but will be in charge of an attaché of the national committee. Chairman Hanna and Secretary Dick expect to be at the Cleveland headquarters all summer.

Cornell Won

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., July 1.—The boat race between the Cornell, Pennsylvania and Columbia crews took place late Wednesday afternoon. At the start Pennsylvania was in the lead at the breakaway; Columbia second. At the first mile Cornell was in the lead by half a length; Columbia by a quarter length. Pennsylvania then forged ahead of Columbia. Cornell won by a length and a half. Columbia was second by a length. Time: 9 minutes and 20 seconds.

Murder on the Battleship Indiana.

NEW YORK, July 1.—Thomas J. Kenny, master-at-arms of the battleship Indiana, was murdered Wednesday on board the ship as it lay at its moorings at the Brooklyn navy yard. The murderer, Philip E. Carter, walked up to him and without a word of warning plunged a bayonet blade up to his heart. Kenny was a popular man, although a strict disciplinarian. The murder was preceded by a quarrel.

Faure's Visit to the Czar.

PARIS, July 1.—President Faure Wednesday informed the cabinet that he had received a letter from the Czar expressing the pleasure it would afford his majesty to receive him at the Peterhof palace. M. Faure added that he had decided to start for Russia at the middle of August.

Reduction in Wages.

STEUBENVILLE, July 1.—At the Mingo Junction Iron & Steel works, where a notice of a 15 per cent. reduction has been placed, to take effect Thursday, the furnace men have met and concluded to work at the reduction. At the meeting of the sheet, bar and continuous mill men Wednesday evening they decided to go on a strike Thursday.

Miners Back to Work.

NEGAUNEE, Mich., July 1.—Orders were received Wednesday to resume work at the Buffalo mines Thursday morning with 250 men.

THE ORATORS

On the Fourth of July Asked to Prominently Treat the Cuban Question.

And Bring Out a Sentiment in Favor of Immediately Granting to Cubans Belligerent Rights—Ex-Queen Liliokalani in the Senate Gallery.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Col. A. A. Aguirre, a Cuban patriot, well-known in Washington, who has lost five brothers officers in the Cuban army, asks the press of the country to urge in their columns that in the Fourth of July exercises the orator of the day shall prominently treat of the Cuban question and bring out the American sentiment in favor of granting belligerent rights to that struggling people as the first step toward ultimate recognition of the independence of Cuba. He desires to call attention to the organization of the National Relief association for Cuba in aid of the American Red Cross in Washington, under the auspices of some of the most prominent women of America. Its object is to raise funds to send the "American Red Cross" to Cuba.

Contributions for this cause will be received by Mrs. Senator J. C. Burrows, president of the association, 1404 Massachusetts avenue, Washington D. C.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Ex-Queen Liliokalani, of the Hawaiian islands, spent some time in the private gallery of the senate Tuesday, accompanied by three members of her suite. She first appeared in the senate marble room and sent her card to Senator Perkins, of California, who, after exchanging a few words with her and introducing her to many of his colleagues, escorted her to the gallery, where she took a front seat and appeared to be an interested listener to the debate on lead ore.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—The work of consolidating small outlying post offices with a large adjacent one, making a single postal district with modern postal facilities, will be pushed vigorously by this administration in all sections of the country. The opposition to the scheme comes, it is said, from residents who have wrong ideas of the objects of the department, or from post office employees whose positions are thereby affected. The results of the consolidation policy so far carried out have been most gratifying to the Washington authorities and First Assistant Postmaster General Heath has determined that consolidation shall be effected wherever possible and feasible. Consolidation abolishes the individual small post offices, with their usually crude service, and substitutes sub-stations for them; reduces the postmasters to sub-agents with accompanying saving of salaries and complicated auditing work, and instead of the many post offices, substitutes the large office with branches, all having free delivery and other advantages accruing to a post office from such privileges. The postal officials are confident that the extension of the movement will result in a big saving in expenditures, while furnishing immensely superior facilities. Several consolidations have been ordered and others are contemplated.

At Los Angeles, Cal., four or five offices nearby have been consolidated with good effect, and similar action has been taken at Denver recently.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—The senate committee on finance has fixed the duty on coal at 67 cents per long ton. This rate applies only to coal shipped from countries which do not impose a higher rate on American coal. It therefore affects only Canada, the Canadian rate on American coal being the same. There has been a strong contention to hold the rate down to that originally fixed by the committee and even to lower it, but this effort was vigorously contested by the senators from the coal producing states, and the latter class have won.

STATE PRINTER PARKS

Will Abolish the Use of Type Setting Machines in the Kansas State Printing Office.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 30.—J. S. Parks, state printer elect, announces that the use of type setting machines will be abolished in the state printing office with the beginning of his administration on Thursday next. During the last session of the legislature the printers made a strong fight to secure the passage of a bill prohibiting the use of machines in the state office. In this they were unsuccessful, but they did succeed in having attached to the appropriation bill a rider which provides that the state printer shall receive but ten cents per 1,000 ems for machine work. It is claimed that at this rate the machines can not be operated except at a loss and as a result they will be thrown out and the state will pay from 30 to 45 cents per thousand for hand composition.

Western Writers Association.

EAGLE LAKE, Ind., June 30.—The Western Writers' association held its formal meeting at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Gov. James A. Mount was elected a member of the association. A very fine programme was rendered, consisting of papers and music. No afternoon session was held, the members taking that time for their cutting. President W. P. Fishback discoursed ably upon "Style" at the evening session. There were many new arrivals Tuesday.

Librarian Spofford to Retire.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—John Russel Young, of Philadelphia, was Tyneside tendered by the president the position of librarian of congress, and it was understood Tuesday night that he has accepted and the nomination will be sent to the senate Wednesday. Ainsworth R. Spofford, for more than memory of man runs to the contrary, has been in charge of this greatest library on earth, unless the British museum be excepted. He has now, because of advancing years, declined to longer continue in service. Mr. Spofford will be made assistant librarian.

SPAIN'S TROOPS.

Fifteen Hundred in the Hospitals at Manzanillo—Two-Thirds of the Soldiers in Santiago de Cuba Incapacitated.

HAVANA, July 1—(Via Key West)—There are 1,500 sick soldiers in the hospital at Manzanillo, and sickness prevails at a high ratio through the entire province of Santiago de Cuba, where at least two-fifths of the troops are incapacitated by fever and other disorders. Beds and other nursing facilities are being forwarded from Havana. The Beattie Bros., a prominent firm of English planters in the Manzanillo district, have offered the government one of their warehouses as a military hospital.

At San Cristobal, in the province of Pinar del Rio, 6,000 "reconcentrados" are suffering acutely from the existing state of war and from disease. It is reported that the well-known insurgent leader, Baldomero Acosta, has succumbed to fever.

The Ledezma column brought 14 men as prisoners to San Cristobal, among whom were Rosa Gomez and Juana Avelina, who had been wounded with bullets. Both were sent to the hospital at Sagua la Grande.

There has been considerable skirmishing during the last two days. On the night of the 20th the insurgents attacked the village of Vega Alta, but the Spanish sent reinforcements and drove them off. They also made an attack upon the fort at Remedios and burned the farm house on the Elbro plantation near the town.

Leader Alfredo Rego attacked and entered the village of Camanayagua, near Cienfuegos, plundered several stores and inflicted severe losses on the garrison. He also destroyed the telegraph line near Crucero.

It is reported that Leaders Lacret and Morlot have passed the trocha near Jucaro from east to west. The insurgents have burned several houses in the outskirts of the village of Santa Maria Rosario, in the province of Havana, while news comes from Batahan that there is considerable concentration of insurgent forces there.

HAVANA, July 1—A special dispatch to La Lucha from Santiago de Cuba says that Gen. Weyler's chief hospital staff has ordered the immediate construction of additional barracks, with beds for the sick. It is added that the local merchants will voluntarily pay the expenses incurred in the erection of these buildings.

The hospital facilities of Guantanamo are also to be increased, and new hospitals are to be established at Cobro, Longo, Palma and Tiguabo, all in Santiago de Cuba province.

A MAN ELECTROCUTED

And Another Horribly Shocked by a Guy Rope That Became Crossed With a Trolley Feed Wire.

CLEVELAND, O., July 1—One man was electrocuted near here Wednesday morning, another was horribly shocked and several were severely burned. The accident occurred at Nine Mile creek, in the eastern suburb. The men were building a steel abutment with the aid of a huge derrick over the creek. A guy rope served to keep the derrick in position. The wire went over the feed wire of the big consolidated trolley system. Some how or other the insulation wore off. Several men took hold of the wire to tighten it. That meant death to one, severe injuries to another and dangerous shock to several. A current of several thousand volts was pulsating through the wire. The first man to take hold of the wire was Jacob Miller. He was 65 years of age, paralyzed. When his hands touched the wire, he gave an ineffectual tug in an effort to free himself. Then with a loud shout he fell dead. Ed McGregor, another workman, took hold of the wire. With a superhuman effort he released his grasp but was hurled 20 feet. He was removed to the hospital. Three other workmen received dangerous shocks.

Triple Suicide.

ST. LOUIS, July 1—What appears to have been a deliberate attempt at triple suicide was made near Wellsboro, Mo., at midnight Tuesday night. Three men, lying side by side, with their heads upon the rail, were struck by Wabash train No. 6, due in St. Louis at an early hour in the morning. The first man's head was cut off, the second one's head was mashed and the third received serious internal injuries. Physicians say there is no hope for the recovery of the injured men. Their names are not known. An examination showed that the men were sober when they took their places on the track.

Democratic State Ticket.

COLUMBUS, O., July 1—The democratic state convention Wednesday afternoon nominated the following state ticket: Governor, Horace L. Chapman; lieutenant governor, Melville D. Shaw; supreme judge, J. P. Spriggs; attorney general, W. H. Dore; state treasurer, James F. Wilson; board of public works, Peter H. Duran; school commissioner, Byron H. Hard.

Jubilee Dinner to the Poor.

LONDON, July 1—The princess of Wales gave a jubilee dinner to the poor of Chelsea Wednesday afternoon at the royal hospital. Three thousand adults were dined during the early part of the afternoon and later 2,500 children were served with dinner. The princess of Wales visited the children, who gave her royal highness an ovation and presented her with an address of welcome.

Another Building Association Falls.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 1—Following the heels of the failure of the Commercial Building Trust Wednesday morning, which did a building and loan business, the Columbia Building, Loan and Savings association Wednesday afternoon went to the wall with assets and liabilities of $160,000 each. As in the case of the Commercial, the cause of the failure is the recent decision of the court of appeals in which the interest rate is attacked and declared illegal. The officers are Gen. Basil W. Duke, president, and J. W. Jenkins, secretary.

FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

Extraordinary Session.

FOURTH JULY'S
the finest day of any in the year.
At least that's how it allus seems to me.

You swell your chest
an' take a breath,
and find you're breathin' freer,
Ez though the air
wuz full of liberty.

The cracklin' o' the crackers goin' off by packs and packs,

The cannon boomin' at the break o' day,
Jes' sort o' sends a joyous little shiver up our backs.

An' the only thing to holler is "hooray."

The big men of the country give us Patrick
Henry's speech,

An' then recite the Declaration, too,
An' the crowd throw up their hats an'
cheer with a nod after each Patriotic orator through.

An' then the silver cornet band (the township's joy and pride)
Inspirin' airs appropriately play,
An' the bangin' an' the poppin' start again on every side.

An' the only thing to holler is "hooray."

An' after bit when darkness comes, the fireworks fizz an' spout

An' Chinese lanterns twinkle midst the trees,

An' the shoulders pretty girls are saunterin' about.

With rounded waists an' dimpled hands to squeeze,

A FAIR & REBEL'S TRICK. A Fourth of July Story

IT was the 3d of July and Betty Logan, known to many as the Belle of the Neutral Ground, that debatable strip of country along the Hudson where the cowboys and skinners roamed at will, stood on the porch of her pleasant little home.

She was half surrounded by vines that failed to conceal her trim figure, the effect of which was heightened by the neat garb she wore. In one hand she held a letter she had just read for the fourth time, and as she lifted her eyes she beheld a man at the edge of the porch.

This man, a person whom the girl ~~sold trusty~~ had just delivered the missive, and while reading it Betty had become oblivious to his presence.

"It's bad news, Peter," said she, advancing a step and looking down into the man's face.

"Another victory for the king's men,
Miss Betty?"

"That is not exactly it. It wasn't much of a battle, Nolan writes—"

The man interrupted the reading with a sudden exclamation.

"The letter is from Capt. Nolan, then?"

"Yes, and he is a prisoner in New York."

"That's bad. I know how he will chafe in confinement, for he wasn't born to rust out behind stone walls. But when they exchange him—"

"That's just the difficulty, Peter. When they exchange him! You may well say that. They will not exchange Nolan for an officer inferior in rank. They never do that, you know, Peter."

"I might have thought of that," answered the man, flushing a little. "I suppose a rescue is out of the question."

"Entirely so," said the girl. "Nolan writes that he is fairly treated, but he wants his liberty. You say the letter was delivered to you at the secret outpost?"

"Yes. I did not ask from whom it was, but obeyed orders and brought it direct to you."

"For which you have my thanks, Peter, and I will see that you are fully paid in the future."

In a few moments the patriotic girl was left alone, and after another reading of the letter, which told how the writer, Capt. Nolan James, youthful officer in the continental army, had been captured by a detachment of British troops, and conveyed to New York, then in possession of the enemy. The letter seemed to crumple in her resolute hand, and when she entered the house she flung it upon the table and picked up another letter lying there.

Unfolding this one she glanced over the lines which traced in a bold mas-tine hand read as follows:

"Capt. Basil Lee, of the royal forces, begs leave to accept Miss Betty Logan's invitation to dine with her Tuesday and will be promptly on hand. Wishing his fair hostess health and happiness, he signs himself her ardent friend,

"CAPT. BASIL LEE,
Fourth Dragoons,

"New York, July 2, 1780."

A faint smile appeared at Betty's mouth as she perused the acceptance and placed it beside the one from her patriotic lover.

Capt. Lee had met her during one of the many incursions made by the royal dragoons along the Hudson, and, though an enemy to American freedom, the girl had found him an agreeable visitor. Ignorant of Capt. James' misfortune, she invited the British officer to dine with her on the Fourth, as she lived almost alone in the old homestead, her parents having died a short time prior to the beginning of hostilities.

The imprisonment of Capt. James would naturally interfere with the pleasures of the coming day, but when the morning of the Fourth came there were no traces of regret on the fair rebel's face.

At ten o'clock Peter, who had been sent to a certain point from which the road leading to New York was visible for a long distance, came back with a broad grin on his face.

"I was thinking, Miss Betty, what a nice thing it would be if we could just contrive to exchange Capt. Nolan for Capt. Lee."

The girl seemed to start.

"What nonsense, Peter!" she exclaimed. "Whatever put that idea into your head?"

"It just walked in," smiled the man.
"You see, they're equal in rank and—"

"Captains both," broke in the girl, looking across the porch from the open door. "These Utopian schemes don't always come out successful."

"Very well, I just give it for what it is worth," and Peter bowed himself out of the girl's presence, and Betty was alone again.

"What a good guesser Peter is," she smiled to herself. "Surely I have not betrayed myself, and no one, I hope, has let the cat out of the bag. I'll just give Peter credit for good guessing, that's all," and she went to her boudoir to dress for the officer's reception.

The old-fashioned clock in the wide hallway was striking 11 when handsome young officer in the somewhat flashy uniform of the Royal Dragoons, one of the crack regiments in the king's service, drew rein in front of the house and dismounted.

His riding boots were polished to perfection and he had brushed from them the few flecks of mud they had encountered on the way up. He looked reassuringly at the house, with its pretty flower beds on the lawn and the trellised porch, upon which stood a rocking-chair, Miss Betty's favorite seat. Throwing the lines over a post, to await Peter's attention, the young captain sauntered towards the house, and just as he mounted the steps a vision of loveliness appeared.

Miss Betty was simply but tastefully dressed and looked very pretty thus arrayed.

She smiled a cordial welcome to the conversation now drifted to other subjects, and Capt. Lee was most pleasantly entertained by his fair hostess.

He knew that Betty Logan was intensely loyal to the cause of the colonies; but out of respect for her apparent helplessness her property had not been disturbed, though on several occasions several spies had been tracked to it.

Her only servants were Peter and a housemaid as loyal as her mistress, and with these Betty, the fair rebel, inhabited the little home near the Hudson in almost open defiance of the soldiers of the king.

Fond of music, Capt. Lee implored his hostess for a song, and rising, Betty swept to the instrument in one corner of the cozy parlor.

"What are your favorites, captain?" she asked, with a sly look over her shoulder.

"'Washington's Retreat' for one," said the officer with a light laugh as he mentioned a song at that time popular in royalist circles in New York.

The cheeks of Betty Logan flushed and her fingers swept the ivory keys as if impelled by magic.

"You don't sing that, I suppose," continued the captain.

"I am here to entertain you and 'Washington's Retreat' shall be given according to request."

In another moment the melodious voice of the girl seemed to fill the house as she sang the piece which had received encore after encore in the theaters wherever the British held sway. Capt. Lee listened like one entranced and his gaze followed her every movement like one enraptured.

"Perhaps you have heard this," said Betty, as the last note died away, and forthwith she started up with a rollicking cowboy air such as the wild marauders of the Neutral Ground were wont to sing when out on their forays.

It was full of the most rebellious sentiment, and some of its pointed allusions to King George drove the color from Capt. Lee's face.

But he was not in a position to grumble, for had not Betty sang a real royal air? He sat mutely and listened as the song crept on and on, the girl seeming to take delight in tingling the ears of her red-coated guest.

Several weeks intervened when one evening a young soldier rode up to the Logan home and sprang lightly to the ground.

He was met at the steps of the trellised porch by a young girl whose eyes sparkled above flushed cheeks.

"They tell me that I owe my exchange to you, Betty," he exclaimed. "Capt. Lee was very obstreperous at first, but he gave in at last and here I am."

"I don't know whether Capt. Lee will ever forgive me, but I didn't know of a better way to celebrate the Fourth of July," was the reply, and the merry laugh that followed told how happy was the Fair Rebel of the Neutral Ground.

CROSSING THE RIO GRANDE.

Driving Two Thousand Cattle from Mexico to the United States.

Something near 2,000 cattle crossed the Rio Grande at Eagle Pass lately.

They were from a ranch in Coahuila and were to be delivered to one of the most prominent ranchmen in the southwest. At this time and place the Rio Grande is a pretty fair sized stream. It is nearly a quarter of a mile wide. At the fording place there is just enough water to swim a cow in the deepest place. It was not supposed, however, and it certainly was not the case, that the cattle would remain in the fording place. As it turned out, they occupied and performed countless maneuvers over about a mile.

The labor of the day began about the middle of the forenoon. The great herd of lowing quadrupeds were driven down at the foot of the old Mexican town across the river and on the long bar that faces the stream. There was an army of Mexicans on every side to keep them in place. A dozen bestrode lank horses; the remainder was afoot. There was an abundance of little brown boys, each with two frail garments and as many powerful lungs. The cattle were driven along the bar up under the bridge and to a point above the two towns to the fording place. And here the leaders were headed out into the stream. They took to the water with apparent willingness, and lashed their tails and proceeded with a great splashing sound as the 8,000 feet began to smite the water. When they were about half submerged the leaders turned a little to the right down stream. As if by previous arrangement the whole right flank turned in the same direction, and the multitude separated and became many little groups. The horsemen dashed in below them with Indian yell. A dozen men were suddenly naked, and they were swimming rapidly out toward the heads of the leaders, with the intention of turning them. Some of them carried clubs in their hands as they swam, and when they came up with the dumb brutes they beat upon their faces. Some were turned in the right direction; many hundreds, less roughly urged, waded aimlessly down stream; others turned toward the bank and raced with the speed of the wind in the open country—dogs, horses and pedestrians in pursuit. The great herd of animals in the middle of the stream found deep water and swam. Little more than their heads was visible, and a thousand horns, suggestive of brush in flood time, caught the sunlight. They floated without apparent effort with the current, with none to control them, and when they sought the bank it was on the side of the river from that which they had started and at about the same point. The group that had been made to cross to the Texas side stood passively together at the edge of the water, with their heads stretched out before them.

The operation was repeated—with about the same success. The notable features of the performance were recalcitrant cattle dashing across sandbars far away, with the plains and far blue hills beyond; powerful and robust Mexicans—some of them entirely naked—riding back and forth with yells that would have been the fortune of a baseball coacher; swift and tireless swimmers gliding back and forth, some of them completely surrounded by mischievous cattle, and hundreds of horns drifting about, seeming without aim, above the surface of the water. It seemed almost impossible to head the great herd in the right direction. Some could be made to go across, but that was obviously what the great majority did not want to do.

By about five o'clock in the afternoon something like 1,500 had been landed on the Texas side. They stood quietly enough when they were over and gave but little trouble to the herders. But those not yet across were naturally those least willing to cross, and all that a cow may do is obstinate was done on this occasion. They appeared to have a great deal more endurance than the horses. They would reach the bank for the hundredth time and race with the spirit of a young yearling just released from a barn. The Mexicans began to rope and throw some of the most mischievous of the evil doers, that they might not lead the others astray, and after falling hard enough to break a limb they would get up, ready for another mad dash. The herders rivaled them in endurance.

One deep-chested fellow was thrown from his horse just as the latter was scrambling out of the water on a slippery bank—the animal stumbling. He rolled over and over, and then jumped up and started in pursuit of his frightened steed. The race was about equal, but another horseman came to the rescue and caught a bridle rein of the runaway. One slip of a boy followed a steer that had got away in the water by himself, and by swimming just in the right place and yelling just the proper manner he succeeded in driving the big fellow across. A great cheer went up from the bridge, and it was faintly echoed by the people along the Mexican side.

Late in the day the cattle that had crossed and which had been standing below the bridge were driven to a point opposite the ford, that the still recalcitrant beasts in Mexico, on seeing them, might be encouraged to come over. As the great mass passed under the bridge it presented a strange sight to the crowd of people above. Looking down, it seemed like a great multi-colored serpent gliding along. The effect was indescribable. Opposite the ford they began moving around in a great circle, like the eddy in a mighty stream. They were becoming restless and a guard was placed about them to prevent their returning to their native land. It was not until close to six o'clock that the last stragglers were brought over, and it was necessary then to bring them over the bridge. There were perhaps half a hundred of these.—Eagle Pass (Tex.) Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The First American Flag.

It has been impossible to decide with certainty who designed the American flag as first adopted by congress but the best recorded evidence gives part of the credit of designing it and all the credit of making it to Mrs. John Ross, an upholsterer, who resided on Arch street, Philadelphia. Her descendants assert that a committee of congress, accompanied by Gen. Washington, who was in Philadelphia in June, 1776, called upon Mrs. Ross and engaged her to make the flag from a rough drawing.

This drawing was, at her suggestion, redrawn by Gen. Washington with a pencil, in her back parlor, and the flag thus designed was adopted by congress.

Although the resolution establishing the flag was not officially promulgated by the secretary of congress until September 3, 1777, it seems well authenticated that the regulation stars and stripes was carried at the battle of the Brandywine, September 11, 1777, and thenceforward during the battles of the revolution.—Youth's Companion.

PERSONAL AND IMPERSONAL.

John B. Duke, the millionaire cigarette maker, recently stated before the Lexow committee in New York that he had never smoked a cigarette in his life.

The queen of Greece is so devoted to flowers that she delights to share with others her pleasures in them. By her orders large quantities are distributed in the hospitals of Athens twice a week.

Lady Aberdeen is again protesting against the use of egret plumes in hats and bonnets. She has written to the editor of a well-known paper which advocates kindness to animals condemning the practice as being one of actual cruelty.

The reigning grand duke of Luxembourg, admittedly one of the richest sovereigns in Europe, is indebted for the major part of his fortune to the percentage paid to him by the farmers of the public gambling tables of Wiesbaden, the capital of his former duchy of Nassau.

Mme. Melby is still suffering from the after effects of influenza. She has, therefore, wisely resolved to go to the south of France and not to sing again in public until she is due at Covent garden. In the autumn she has already arranged to tour in the English provinces under Messrs. Harrison.

Dr. Eugene Dubois has discovered in Java the skull and thigh bone of an animal which he claims to be the missing link. From the two bones he has constructed, on paper, at any rate, the pithecthropus, which is half man, half ape. Mr. W. K. Marischal gives an account of this discovery in the English Illustrated Magazine.

THE POTOMAC BASS.

Said by Good Judges to Be the Largest of Fishes.

This fish is a wonder. Seldom exceeding five pounds in weight, nothing gamier is to be found in the waters of the earth. No mountain trout or pike or pickerel or salmon or ouazaniche, or pound for pound, is his equal. To an insatiable appetite and the predatory instinct of the eagle he joins a supernatural strength and activity and the temper of the devil. Firmly fastened at the end of a strong snell and 60 feet of line, he will leap two yards into the air and shake his head like a dog in the effort to disengage himself. There is no trick known to finny tribes that he will not practice. He darts under the boat with a wicked rush and shows his knowledge of the frailty of the tackle. He will circle round and round a snag until the line is hopelessly involved. He will sink like a stone to the bottom and lie there like a log. Lifted to the surface by main strength, he is off with the speed of light straightaway as the crow flies until the reel buzzes like a bee and the thumb pressed upon it burns as if the hand held a live coal. Sometimes he will keep going until the strands part with a snap and he flashes on up the river with 200 feet of costly silk trailing behind him. When seemingly exhausted he is reeled in and lies a sluggish, defeated mass within a yard of the boat, his gills opening and shutting rapidly. The triumphant sportsman leans forward with the dip net, when with a whirl and a lunge and a momentary flash of his silvery sides he is away, and another half hour of intense struggle begins. It needs a quick hand, a cool brain, a wrist of steel and the patience of Griselda to capture the small-mouthed bass when he is at his best and bent on business.

The history of his introduction to the potomac is peculiar. A quarter of a century ago he was unknown to these waters. At that time a farmer with sportsman's blood in him imported some of the young and put them in his fish pond, which was near the river. Two years after, when the fry had attained a respectable size, one of the freshets which this country is noted for overflowed the pond, broke down its walls and swept its contents into the river. So pugnacious is the bass that in the time since clasped it has utterly exterminated its large-mouthed kinmen, which before was plentiful, and all other fishes common to the stream, except minnows, which are too numerous, and a small perch, which escapes by keeping close to the banks, where there is not enough water for its heavy-draught enemy. Even the dread pike has found his match.—Chicago Times-Herald.

That widely-traveled and judicial-minded British novelist, Anthony Trollope, wrote to the London Times many years ago:

"Of all the sights on this earth of ours which tourists travel to see—at least of all those which I have seen—I am inclined to give the palm to the Falls of Niagara. In the catalogue of such sights, I intend to include all buildings, pictures, statues and wonders of art made by men's hands and also all beauties of nature prepared by the Creator for the delight of his creatures. This is a long word; but, as far as my taste and judgment go, it is justified. I know no other one thing so beautiful so glorious and so powerful."

The Dog Came Back.

The wonderful achievements of Bourbon bats, which have been chronicled in THE NEWS, have been eclipsed by a Scotch terror named Joe Blackburn, which was the property of John Murphy, a watchman at Walsh's distillery. Being found guilty of killing fine bantam chickens on the distillery premises, Joe was sentenced to death. He was hung to a rafter until he was apparently dead.

Then he was slammed countless times against the floor, and his carcass was carted away and left as a feast for the buzzards. Joe's executioner reckoned without his host, for bright and early on the morrow Joe sneaked back into one of the warehouses looking but little the worse for his terrible experience. That day, however, the dog was abducted, and the distillery knows him no more.

SPARROW FIGHT.

Caused a Run on the Bank—Queer Human Nature.

"The recent expose of the swindling speculative concerns in Wall street has shown how remarkably unsuspecting and gullible the average man and woman with small savings is," said a prominent New England savings bank official recently.

"It is just as funny, when yours is not the bank involved, to see how suspicious and fearful these same people become when there is the slightest sign of something wrong in the case of such ordinary reputable financial institutions as savings banks. People never stop to think about the most impossible advertisements of 'what syndicate,' etc., until after it is all over. They usually do all their thinking about solid savings banks before and not after something has happened."

"One day last week a most amusing thing occurred in connection with one of our smaller savings banks. It was during the noon luncheon hour. Two sparrows had been having a fierce battle in the street in front of the bank in question. The traffic on this particular street is quite heavy, particularly while clerks, merchants and others are on their way to and from the midday meal. The sparrows made a considerable noise and their movements finally landed them on the roof of the bank building. First one pedestrian stopped to watch the fight, and so on until a fair-sized crowd stood on the opposite side of the street and looked up intently toward the low bank building."

"That was enough. Late arrivals guessed at once something was the matter, and soon there was a rush from the outskirts of the crowd. A few were on their way to get their bank books and others to warn their friends. In the afternoon 38 depositors had appeared inside of half and hour, many of them humble, foreign-born workmen, and it took the best efforts of the entire bank force to quiet them down and induce them not to withdraw their deposits. As a matter of fact, four were paid off in gold to prove that they could have their money if necessary. Then they didn't want it."—N. Y. Mail and Express.

NIGHTMARE OF ROYAL COURTS.

Mourning for Rulers and Princes Keeps Royalties in Perpetual Black.

Court mourning may be described as the nightmare of European court life, as well as that portion of the official world and of society which is more or less intimately connected with the court. No entertainments can ever be organized, no festivity planned, without the everlasting dread of some royal death taking place to render necessary a postponement or an abandonment of the entire affair. Annoying for the men, it is still more so for the women, since they never know until the last minute whether they can wear colors or whether they are condemned to garments of sable hue. For even when the relationship of the dead prince or princess of the blood is so remote as to render unnecessary the postponement of social and official functions and entertainments, court mourning is, nevertheless, necessary for a period ranging all the way from ten days to three months, during which time every woman with pretensions to social standing is expected to array herself in black and to relegate her diamonds, her rubies, her sapphires and her emeralds and her turquoise to her casket, and to wear nothing in the shape of jewelry but pearls, which are the symbol of tears, while the men are expected to add a mourning band to their hats, to restrict themselves to black ties for day wear, and, if entitled to wear a uniform, to adorn the sleeves thereof with an arm-band of ermine.

Royal persons and court officials are great sticklers about such matters as these, and, while any lady who ventures during a period of court mourning to attend a drawing-room or court function in colored attire exposes herself to an ungracious reception on the part of the royal personages present, there have even been numerous occasions where women have actually been prevented by the officials of the lord chamberlain's department from entering the presence of royalty at all, in consequence of their being dressed otherwise than in the prescribed black toilets.—N. Y. Tribune.

Petroleum Lakes.

Lakes of petroleum exist at Balakani, in the district of Baku, on the Caspian sea. A traveler on his first visit to these regions is astonished to see these dark-looking, almost illimitable lakes, and still more surprised when he learns that these lakes are filled, not with water, but with petroleum. The whole soil around Baku is impregnated with petroleum, which now and again bursts forth in great fountains. One burst in September, 1896, began to spout oil with extraordinary force, deluging the whole district. Nothing could be done to stop the outflow, which on the eighth day had reached a daily rate of 11,000 tons, or more than the entire product of the world at that time. Another gigantic fountain burst out in March, 1887, rising to a height of 350 feet, and, after forming an extensive petroleum lake, forced itself into the sea. The "Pitch lake of Trinidad" is the largest deposit of solid or semi-solid bitumen known. It has an area of 11,467 acres. The surface is not level, but is composed of spherical, polygonal and mushroom-like masses. The softer parts of the lake constantly evolve gas. It was from Trinidad asphalt that Mr. Gesney first prepared kerosene by distillation.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

MATILDA ANN AND ME.

When the nights are getting longer,
And the stars begin to fall,
While the early pippins ripen
By the mossy garden wall,
Then I take my easy rocker,
In the kitchen after tea,
And we're happy as two lovers,
Just Matilda Ann and me.

While she washes out the dishes,
In her soft and dainty way,
'Tis a pleasure just to watch her,
And I haven't much to say,
As she sets them in the cupboard,
And we both of us agree
Not to light the parlor burner,
For Matilda Ann and me.

So we put our feet together
Closer to the glowing warden,
And declare them ne'er existed.
Such a home we're on earth.
Then sometimes she lets me kiss her:
Shades are down, and none can see,
Else I'm sure they'd stop to envy
My Matilda Ann and me.

CAPTAIN CLOSE

BY CAPTAIN CHARLES KING.

XVI.—CONTINUED.

Then, when May came round and Lambert asked for three days leave, Minor hummed and hawed and looked at his staff officer and finally requested that it be submitted to writing; and "it" came back with a curt endorsement to the effect that Lieut. Lambert would be expected hereafter to show more interest in matters connected with his regimental duties; the application was disapproved.

All this time he had written every few weeks to Close, and got a very nice letter in reply, written by a young fellow who announced himself as the captain's brother, Wallace. The captain was getting better—very much better—but the eye doctor's bill was a big one, and he thought the government ought to pay it. He had bought some land up there six years before, and, what with schools and roads and bridges, the taxes were awful. What he wouldn't mind doing would be to come back to the regiment as quartermaster; but in those days there was no four-year limit to staff positions, and the incumbents, both adjutant and quartermaster, proposed to hang on as long as possible, and Lambert replied that he feared there would be no chance.

And then one day there came a telegram to the commanding officer of Company "G" at the barracks with the brief announcement that a soldier serving in the Twenty-sixth infantry under the name of Roberts had been identified by Corporal Floyd Walton, Fourth cavalry, as Private Riggs, a deserter from the tenth. Please send charges and descriptive list. Two weeks later Lieut. Lambert was summoned to Austin as a witness before the general court-martial appointed for his trial. The Morgan line steamer would not sail until Saturday night. There was time to run over and see if the Waltons had not something to send to their soldier boy in Texas, and Lambert sent his trunk to the Morgan wharf while the Mobile boat paddled him away through the Rigoles and out into Mississippi sound and landed him at the familiar pier at Pass Christian just at twilight of a lovely May evening. Ten minutes' walk along the shore brought him to an enclosure wherein the moonbeams were beginning to play among the leaves of the magnolia and to throw a huge black shadow, that of the grove of live oaks, over the veranda of an old, white-painted southern homestead bowered in vines and shrubbery at the end of the broad shell pathway leading from the gate. Somewhere among the foliage a mocking bird was caroling to the rising moon, and the music of soft, girlish voices and subdued laughter came drifting out on the evening air. Lambert's heart gave a quickened throb or two as he recognized Kate Walton's unmistakable tones. He had to traverse the length of the moonlit walk. She, with her unseen friend, was in shadow, so there was no possibility of trying the effect of surprise.

"Well, whay'n the wide wuhld 'd you come from?" was her nonchalant greeting. "Ah supposed you were day'dn bur'd." (There is no such thing as spelling that word as pronounced by the rosiest, sauciest, and possibly sweetest little mouth in creation. He could not take his eyes from it, and she knew it.)—"Miss Awgden, this is Mr. Lambert. Ah think you've heard sister Esthul speak of him.—Ah suppose you want to go right in to see him. Ah'll call him down."

So Lambert made his bow to Miss Odgen, who had her own womanly intuitions as to the extent of his eagerness to see sister Esther, and who presently declared she had to go home, and went without much delay over the leave-taking, in spite of Katesie's usual remonstrance and well-feigned disappointment. Miss Walton, in fact, hung on to her all the way to the gate, and made every proper and apparent effort to detain her there; but a wise head had Miss Bettie Odgen: she would not delay. She had heard sister Esther talk of Mr. Lambert time and again, and had read in Katesie's significant silence or simulated scorn a whole volume of information. She went tripping lightly, laughingly away, and Katesie watched her until she was out of sight, then came dawdling slowly back. She well knew it would be like Esther to come down inside of 20 minutes.

Lambert was seated in the big wicker chair, amusing himself with a kitten. He did not even look up when she finally returned.

"Hasn't Esthul come down yet? Ah told huh yuh wuh hyuh, ten minutes ago."

"No. Possibly she didn't understand. I didn't hear her answer. Indeed, I could hardly hear you call."

"That's because you were listening to Bettie Awgden." (Pause for reply or denial: none offered.) "She doesn't like Yankees any better'n I did—do."

"Then it was on my account she left so suddenly. Where does she live? Uh ren and call her back and tell her—what shall I tell her?—that I only wanted to say good-by to Mrs. Scrooge?"

"You haven't said how-de-do yet."

"I haven't? How utterly stupid of me! You see between Miss Odgen and the cat, you were so engrossed that I deferred that ceremony until you should have time to devote to me. Permit me." And carefully depositing pussy on the chair, he quickly bent low and seized Miss Katesie's hand, which he raised toward his lips: "Miss Walton, I am so glad to see you again. This fortnight has seemed a year."

Indignantly she snatched her hand away.

"Fawntight! It's five weeks to-day since you were hyuh." Then, suddenly conscious: "Not that I say-uh."

He started up in feigned astonishment. "Five weeks? You amaze me! and how sweet of you to keep count!" (Something more than mere teasing and merriment now in the sparkle of his eyes and the twitching about the corners of his handsome, sensitive mouth.) Those five weeks have been five years."

But she had sprung to the doorway, wrathful at being so artfully trapped. "Ah didn't keep count. It was Moh; 'n Ah don't say-uh how long you stay away, or how soon you go. Esthul ain't you ayuh coming down? Mr. Lambert says he's got to go."

"You haven't told me how Mrs. Walton is, and Mr. Scrooge, Miss Katesie. And how's Cousin Bart?"

"Cousin Bart's up at Quitman; so's Walton; and Moh's 'bout the same. She'll nayuh be any better so long's Floyd's whuh he is—weah-ing a Yankee jacket."

"That is queer, isn't it? The queerest thing about it is that he's just been made corporal in the very troop he charged into at Selma. A classmate of mine is second lieutenant in the same troop, and wrote me about it."

"Floyd ought to be the lieutenant." "Miss Walton, you continually surprise, and now you delight me! This is really promising! A southern girl says her brother ought to be a Yankee officer."

But she flew at him from the doorstep, her eyes flashing fire. He seized the kitten and held the struggling quadruped, paws foremost, between him and the impending vengeance.

"Oh! Ah do despise an' hate you maw an' maw ev'y time you come. You're mean, spiteful, hateful! You know Ah nevuh meant any such thing. Ah'd see'n him if he was! Ah'd tuhn mah back on him—as Ah do on you now an' Ah wish it was fo'evuh!"

And, suiting action to word, the tumbling, clattering ringlets which fell upon her pretty shoulders were flouted almost in his face as she whirled about and marched back to the doorway.

"Well," said Lambert, mournfully, "it's an ill-wind that blows nobody good. Your wish bids fair to be granted. I think I won't disturb Mrs. Scroogs to-night, and if you'll tell me where to find Miss Odgen I'll bid her come back to you, so that you can resume the fun I interrupted. Kindly say to Mrs. Scroogs that if she has anything to send to Floyd and can get it ready before ten to-morrow morning I'll be glad to take it with my baggage. The hotel porter will come for it. Good-night, pussy. You don't seem to object to Yanks. Good-by, Miss Katesie. When your wishes are so promptly granted and you so easily get rid of a fellow you might shake hands with him, but pussy'll have to do."

With that he solemnly took the kitten by a fury paw and with ludicrous gravity gave it a formal shake, then turned deliberately away. He was down the steps and crunching along the shell walk before she started from the stupor which had seized her. Then she sprang to the edge of the veranda, and he, treading lightly now and listening for the sounding of the summons for a parley, heard, as he expected, the half-tremulous, half-truculent hail:

"Aw, Mist' Lambert!"

"Yes?"

"Whuh you going?"

"Oh, didn't I tell you? I'm ordered to Texas."

Then he listened, wickedly, maliciously, and vouchsafed no further word. For a moment not a sound came from the shaded veranda. Slowly, therefore, he turned, and, treading as though on china teacups, went on towards the gate. Did he hope she would call again? Did he know or realize the deep-rooted, stubborn pride of the southern girl? Slowly, more slowly still, he faltered to the gate. Nearing it, still eagerly listening, he shortened step, only pretending to walk. Still no sound, no summons to return. His hand was on the latch, and there it waited, reluctant to open, but waiting was in vain. He glanced back over his shoulder, and, vague and shadowy, he could just distinguish the outline of the slender form he had grown to love with such longing and tenderness and passion. It clung there motionless. At least, then, she had not turned indifferently away. But the word, the whisper, he prayed for and craved to hear, and would so eagerly have obeyed, came not to recall him. Fifteen—twenty seconds he waited, then, insidiously pride, or pique, or resolution, threw open the white barrier, slammed it after him, and strode briskly away, startling the mocking birds into sudden silence with the lively whistling of an old West Point quickstep.

But Esther, coming forth from the open doorway to greet and welcome their friend, saw the erect, soldierly figure marching off in the moonlight; saw her little sister standing as though rooted to the spot, heard the ostentatious spirit and swing and rhythm of "Buenas noches;" heard a faint, questioning, incredulous, tearful little voice piping: "Mr. Lambert! Mr. Lambert!" and the woman had learned in that instant what the lover would have given worlds to know.

"Lieutenant, there's no use trying. We're only twenty, and there must be two hundred of 'em. They've got that stage load long before now, escort and all. The whole thing's over with. If there were any women 'twould be different; every man of us would go then to try to rescue them; but there were only men. I'm as sorry for Col. Sweet as you can be; but we can get his body when the Indians have gone. We can't afford to lose any more of our people."

The speaker was the captain of a party of Texas frontiersmen—rangers they were afterwards called, when their organization was more complete; but these were the days when the Lone Star state was uninhabited by railroads and when to its very heart—far as the capital—the savage Kiowas and Comanches often raided in full force, ravaging the scattered settlements far and wide. Lieut. Lambert, his duty finished with his testimony in the case of the deserter Riggs, had obtained permission to delay his return a few days and taken stage to Lampasas, where Floyd Walton was stationed with his troop. Lambert would not willingly return without seeing him and delivering in person the little packages so hurriedly prepared at the new home. Then, too, there was no man in the army in whom the young officer now felt so deep an interest. Was he not Katesie's brother, and might not that brother have some influence over that obstinate heart?

It was not the porter of the hotel who went for these packages. It was Lambert himself, hoping, of course, to see the young lady whom he had so successfully tormented the evening previous; but his scheme had been checkmated in most absurdly unromantic fashion. The New Orleans evening paper among its military items contained a brief paragraph to the effect that Lieut. Lambert was ordered over to Austin as a witness before a court-martial there in session, but would return to the barracks in a week or ten days, and this paper he had been careless enough to leave on the veranda. Katesie had gone miserably to her room. Esther had lit upon the paragraph, and in ten minutes Lambert's melodramatic scheme was exploded. Never would he forget the saucy merriment in her pretty face when he appeared upon the scene that morning, hoping and expecting to find her patient, piteous, and mutely begging to be forgiven before he went away. He had come prepared to be grave, sorrowful, dignified, and then to be disarmed by her distress, to lead her away under the magnolias to the shaded recesses of the old southern garden, there to assure her that she was pardoned, and then to tell her how she was loved. A charming chateau in Espagne was that which the boy had builded; a sweet, sad, blissful, ecstatic parting was it all to be as a result of his skillful use of his "sudden orders to Texas;" but, like many another well-laid plan, it went ludicrously awry. She was there on the veranda, romping with her kitten, when he came and never made the slightest reference to his departure. He alluded gloomily to the fact that the boat would be along in less than an hour, and she cheerfully responded: "Oh! Ah do despise an' hate you maw an' maw ev'y time."

THE FARMING WORLD.

SECURING BARN DOORS.

A Device That Saves Much Annoyance and Lots of Temper.

I am using something on my farm which may be of value to my fellow farmers. I will send a sketch with explanations so that any farmer may use one if he wishes. It is a device for fastening barn doors open, or catching them if they slam open. It is of greater utility because it can be used in cases where the doors overlap each other in opening, as in the figure. It may be simplified to meet the necessity of holding only one door, or two doors, any reasonable distance apart. It is secure and serviceable. You will need for its construction three small posts and several pieces of boards, two small pieces of one-eighth inch rope, two old pails (empty paint cans are all right), a few good eight-penny nails, two old bolts and a few common wire staples (or you may use nails and bend them.) For tools you will need a hammer, saw, brace and one-fourth inch bit, and a shovel. Now read these directions over in connection with the accompanying figure and you can try your hand at one as soon as you like and be certain of success. A, A and A, are three uprights or posts set at such an angle and position that as the doors open they will reach to points marked F with their outer edge. B, B and B are three boards nailed securely to the tops of A, A and A, so as to form a secure triangular base for the locks or latches to rest upon. The latches or locks C C should be of hard wood, oak or hickory, and one end should be chopped or sawed as in the figure, being careful to have the edges marked H very smooth and the notches marked F deep enough to hold the door securely. E E are latch guards or small pieces nailed securely on raised blocks so as to secure the locks C C, and at the same time to allow them considerable side play. At I on each lock a hole should be bored extending through B. Though these holes drop a bolt; an old one is as good as any. These are the pivots on which C and C turn. Next fasten one end of your piece of rope to C and C as in the figure and run the other end through the auger holes J J and fasten to them the pails into which drop several stones or anything which will give them weight. Now if you have followed the directions carefully, when you open your doors they will swing so that their outer edges will engage the locks at H H, and as you still push them farther back the pressure on the locks will overcome the resistance of the weights attached to the ropes and the locks will swing back and let the edges of the doors catch in the notches FF and the weights K K will hold them securely in any ordinary gale. The dotted line shows position of the door fastened open.—Deamor R. Drake, in Ohio Farmer.

BARN DOOR FASTENER.

HINTS FOR STOCKMEN.

Color has nothing to do with the value of cattle.

Good horses find ready sale in the east.

Don't send poor stock to market. It is losing game.

Badly ventilated stables are pretty sure to injure the horse.

Corn is too heated a food to be fed alone to horses in hot weather.

Kindness to the young animal is a cheap way to increase its value.

Give the growing animals plenty of room. They should have plenty of space.

A well mated team means mated as regards strength and endurance, rather than size and color.

The Poland-China pig has made fortunes for many men, and will make fortunes for many more.

If the rail fences are somewhat out of repair, try running a strand of barb wire along the top of them.

Use the same gentle method with the mule colt as is used with the horse colt. It will add 50 per cent. to the value of the mule.—Western Plowman.

Cholera and Indigestion.

As the warm weather comes on there will be cases of chicken-cholera reported. It is safe to say that cholera among fowls is a very rare disease. Persons diagnose cases as cholera when such is not true. When cholera appears it usually takes off the flock in a few days. Should the hens be affected with bowel disease and the difficulty continue for quite awhile, it may be safely concluded that indigestion from overeating, and not cholera, is at fault, the remedy being to shut off all food and compel the hens to work and scratch—Farm and Fireside.

Rapid Development of Pigs.

The fact that the country is short on swine and long on corn, renders it especially desirable this year that growers should feed and care for the pigs in a way that will develop them rapidly and perfectly. The tendency is to feed the growing pigs too much corn. Some corn is all right, but the ration should contain some more nitrogenous food to give a good development of bone and muscle; then when you come to fatten on corn you will have something to build on.—Rural World.

THE RAZOR-BACK HOG.

A Kansas Editor Tells What He Thinks of the Creature.

Among the many odes, apostrophes and biographies written of the razor-back hog the Cottonwood Falls (Kan.) Leader gets out a good one: "The razor-back is a breed of hogs raised in the south before the war and still to be found in some localities. He is built on the Swiss-cottage style of architecture. His ears lay back with a devil-may-care air. His tail has no curl, but hangs limp as a dish-rag. The highest point of his corrugated back is ten inches above the root of the tail. He ignores the slow, stately walk of the Berkshire and goes in a lively 2:10 trot. He always travels as if he were trying to catch a train which had just whistled for the station and he had a quarter of a mile to go.

"The thoroughbred razor-back prowls around the woods, living on acorns, nuts and roots, and, if necessary, can climb a tree like a monkey. Occasionally he crowds under a gate and assists in harvesting his owner's corn crop, and if he has any time to spare from his owner's crop he will turn in and assist his neighbor, often working at night rather than see the crop spoil for want of attention. He never knew the luxury of a sty. He wouldn't get fat if he could and is only fit to kill on the day of eternity.

"Crossing the razor-back with the blue-blood stock makes no improvement. The only successful way is to cross him with a locomotive going 30 miles an hour. He then becomes an imported thoroughbred and the railroad company pays for him at the rate of 50 cents a pound. The ham of a razor-back is almost as juicy as the ham of an iron five-dog, but not quite as good eating as sassafras bark. A man who is authority on razor-backs says a razor-back is the only bird of prey that is amphibious in its habits and can lift a gate off its hinges without ruffling a feather."

CATTLE ON THE FARM.

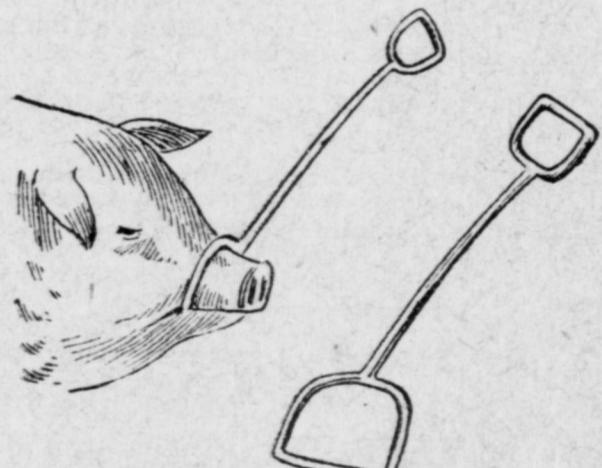

The Man Who Has Kept His Farm Well Stocked Is Happy Now.

A few years ago it was common to hear the remark that farm lands were too high in price to make cattle raising feasible or profitable. The demand this season for beef-bred bulls would seem to indicate that the average farmer has undergone a change of mind upon that point. The fact is, farm lands have been going down in price with too much grain and grass and too few cattle, says the Nebraska Farmer. At the same time cattle have been climbing up in the scale of prices, until all of us are beginning to see more clearly the reciprocal relations that should and must exist between the farm lands of this rich corn belt region, and that class of cattle especially adapted to the consumption of corn. There is not a farm in the state but that is actually worth more money per acre to-day for having supported a herd of cattle the past ten years. The fertility of its acres is retained instead of being shipped away in the form of hay and grain. It is, therefore, a pretty well settled principle among farmers that the man who stays by good cattle through thick and thin is all the better off for doing so. In all such matters, of course, the general public mind is bound to fluctuate. Cattle are in greater favor while they are scarce in numbers, then they become less popular with the masses as they multiply. But the cattle man who goes right along sawing wood one year after another for ten years, has better promise of success with his farm than to undertake to dodge from one thing to another with every wind that blows. Beef cattle have their innings just now, and happy is the man who has kept his lands well stocked with good blood. He is a sure winner in the long run.

HANDY HOG HOLDER.

It is Easily Adjusted and Just as Easily Removed.

The simple, inexpensive article for holding hogs, illustrated herewith, recommends itself to anyone who has many hogs to ring. It will save time and labor enough in ringing 20 hogs to pay for itself the first time. The hogs should be confined in a close pen so that the one who handles the holder can walk up behind them and reach over and slip the larger stirrup-shaped end over the snout and into the mouth. The hog will back up and the operator standing in front can very easily hold any hog perfectly still. It is easily adjusted, easily taken out, and when in use gives a leverage upon the upper jaw which secures perfect control of the animal in ringing.—Farm and Home.

HOG-RINGING MADE EASY.

To Make Good Whitewash.

For a good whitewash for your bedroom ceiling put a piece of lime weighing about five pounds in a granite pan or bucket; pour on it a gallon of water, allow it to boil and slack until the steaming is over; take from this two quarts of the liquid lime, put it in a wooden or granite bucket, and add sufficient water to make it rather thin. Add a small amount of pure indigo, sufficient to give it the proper color; add a teaspoonful of salt and half a teaspoonful of lampblack, stir well. This will give you a perfectly white ceiling; if you wish it colored add one of the colors which you may purchase at any druggist's, stating that it is to be used with lime.—Ladies' Home Journal.

ON THE FARM.

HER LIFELIKE STATUE.
Signalized Her Departure from the World of Artists.

An estimate of the loss of the soluble portions of manure that is exposed to rains and the direct rays of the sun, if it could be made, would show that one-half of its value is lost by leaching, fire-fanging, etc.

In a dry season there is no fertilizer which produces better results with potatoes than wood ashes, notwithstanding the fact that ashes seem to dry themselves. Equally good results will follow when they are sprinkled on the strawberry bed.

The mistake of keeping and using crossbreed males aids materially in degenerating the hogs on many farms. The boar should be a thoroughbred, or there will be no uniformity in the offspring. There is little pleasure in raising monstrels.

It is claimed that the use of ensilage enables the dairyman to keep twice as many cows as when no ensilage is used. There is no crop so easily grown and at so small an outlay for labor as ensilage corn, and it not only provides a large addition to the bulky foods, but enables the dairyman to give succulent food in winter, thus keeping the animals in good condition.

Navy beans can be grown profitably, and they bring as good prices as any other crop. The heaviest yields are secured when they are carefully cultivated and grown on ground that has been well manured the previous year. The harvesting of the crop is the critical work with them, as they are liable to damage if exposed to rains after harvesting them, but there is machinery now in use which lessens the labor and makes them as sure as any other crop.

POPULAR SCIENCE.

According to the experiments of M. Seguy and M. Quenisset the X-rays cause dangerous palpitations of the heart. The experiments were made on medical students and upon themselves, and M. Seguy and M. Quenisset describe the palpitations as violent and unendurable unless the rays were interrupted by a metallic plate.

Alaska, our remarkable outlying territory, is almost as large in area as the entire United States east of the Mississippi. It is rich in mineral wealth, and has already yielded many times its cost in the precious and other metals. Every year its value to the United States is increasing, and yet it is entirely isolated from the rest of our territory—just as Cuba would be were we to acquire it.

"Alcohol," said M. Martindale, in paper read recently before the Pharmaceutical Society, "is not a germicide. When present to the extent of 20 per cent. by volume of absolute alcohol, it has an inhibitory effect on the germination of most of the micro-organisms occurring in aqueous solutions of vegetables and animal substances; but the germs propagate readily as it evaporates."

Naturalists consider it a wonderful fact that the Bermuda Islands have only seven native species of land birds, while no less than 128 species pay visits to the islands. Many of these visitors are birds which pass the summer in the United States, and utilize the Bermuda Islands as a convenient winter resort, thus imitating some of their human compatriots. Even some American birds follow the example of the birds by wintering in the Bermudas.

SURED AT HOME: send stamp for book DR. J. B. HARRIS & CO., Pike Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

I can recommend Piso's Cure for Consumption to sufferers from Asthma.—E. D. Townsend, Ft. Howard, Wis., May 4, 1894.

SILENT SUFFERERS.

Women do not Like to Tell a Doctor the Details of Their Private Ills.

The reason why so many women suffer in silence from the multiple disorders connected with their sexual system is that they cannot bear to broach the subject to a man, even if he is a physician.

No one can blame a modest, sensitive woman for this reticence. It is unnecessary in these times, however, for a woman makes to all afflicted women a most generous offer. Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., bids every woman who suffers to write to her and confide every symptom that annoys her, and she will give her advice without charge, and that advice is based upon the greatest experience ever possessed by man or woman in this country, and extends over a period of twenty-three years, and thousands upon thousands of cases. Why suffer in silence any longer? Don't fear to tell here everything.

"I am sure you will like it, general," she said, with a winning smile. "It fairly lives and breathes. I confess I am in love with it myself."

On the appointed evening the general, with some misgivings over the delicacy of the task intrusted to him, presented himself. Instead of inviting him to the studio, his hostess took him by surprise, offered him last to sit down, and began to speak.

"Oh, it's a statuette, is it?" he asked.

"Well, yes, you might call it so," she answered, as she went out of the room. In a few minutes she returned, bearing in her arms—a baby!—Chicago Times-Herald.

HEALTHY AT SEVENTY-TWO.

Mr. C. M. Higgins Passes the Three Score and Ten Mile Post in Good Health.

For a Decade Previous, However, He was a Great Sufferer from Rheumatism. The Story of His Battle with It is of Interest.

From the Leader, Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. C. M. Higgins, of Collinwood, Ohio, one of the attractive eastern suburbs of Cleveland, is a retired and highly-respected citizen and has passed the threescore and ten milestone in the journey of life. He is in his 72d year. He with his wife, lives at No. 277 Clark Ave.

Until two years ago Mr. Higgins had been a sufferer from rheumatism for ten years. Nearly every part of his body was affected, but especially his right side below the hip. He tried medicine to ease the pain, but to no avail. In the fall of 1894 he purchased two boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Mr. Higgins said:

"The pain was greatest in the fall, winter and spring, owing to the dampness, and my right leg and hip were helpless most of the time. I had to
